

Dr. Mary Lou Bryant Frank, Ph.D., M.S., M.Ed.,

Positions: Fellow, Institute for Higher Education at the University of Georgia, and adjunct faculty at Middle Georgia State University and Brenau University.

She is a licensed psychologist, court approved mediator, consultant, and speaker. She is co-founder of the consulting group Transforming Mediation and has served as vice president for academic affairs at Middle Georgia College, dean of undergraduate studies at Kennesaw State University, department head of psychology and sociology at North Georgia College and State University, and head of the Eating Disorders Treatment Program at Arizona State University.

Her text, "The mind of a peacemaker: The psychology of mediation" is in second edition. She has published in national and international journals on peacemaking, compassion, eating disorders, existentialism, and diversity. Her recent book, "The Mind of a Peacemaker: The Psychology of Mediation," is in second edition.

She served as the president of the International Academy of Dispute Resolution, president of Georgia Association for Women in Higher Education, and currently serves on the International Association of Dispute Resolution Board of Directors, the International Women's Think Tank, and several international research councils and law journals.

She received the Distinguished Provider Award in Counseling and has been the recipient of grants, national leadership awards, teaching awards, diversity leadership awards, and awards for community service.

Most recently, she received an honorary doctorate from the University of Georgia in Tbilisi for her international work in conflict resolution.